CRAVE is an exploration into the light and dark sides of sex, intimacy, love, lust, and passion. It is best described as follows:

Like a garden, the beauty of the flowers is possible due to the compost from which they grow;
Like a lighthouse, the beauty and security of the light is only possible due to the darkness in which it shines;
Like the cool chill of a summer's breeze, the comfort is possible due to the overwhelming heat of the day;
Like the much needed compassion of a dear friend, this is only possible when we struggle.

CRAVE is light and dark; it is naughty and nice; it is Celestial and Carnal; it was born of terrible emotions and of Divine guidance. It was born of ego and Soul. It is infused with pride and humility. It is truly Yin and Yang. You might find some posts you have to read through parsed fingers or with a hand over your mouth--exactly as I find myself when I'm writing them--yet other posts might make your heart flutter. This is the point. How can you ever know the Light if you have never seen or explored the darkness. And this duality is what CRAVE is. The darkness is not bad--it's simply not yet illuminated. Until you explore it and in turn express it, how can you ever know who you truly are and what you are capable of? Can you expect to simply walk into your Majestic Garden and see endless flowers of beauty and awe if you have not had your hand in the dirt and muck that allows them to grow? Surely not. This is CRAVE.
