The town known as "The Kiln," has received nationwide notoriety due to one of its native sons, former Green Bay Packers' quarterback Brett Favre. The community, located 10 miles north of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, on the Gulf coast, was named for the kilns built by the early French settlers to produce tar and charcoal. In later years, with the growth of the timber industry, the town of Kiln was touted as having the largest sawmill and drying kiln in the South. During that period of the early 1900s, there was a hospital, a large hotel, and hundreds of mill-houses, none of which exist today. Later, the Kiln, as the town was commonly called, enjoyed a second boom when it became known as the Moonshine Capital of the World during the bootlegging days of Prohibition. It was said that an average of $4,000 of sugar a week was sold by a small local merchant. Kiln liquor had a reputation for high alcoholic proof and went under such names as Jourdan River Dew, White Lightning, Shinny, etc. The area around the Kiln is the fastest growing region of the county, which is, itself, one of the fastest growing counties in Mississippi. Ellis tracks the Kiln story from the early American Indians; the colonial periods of the French, English, Spanish; and the early migrations of Americans - to the present day. The book is liberally sprinkled with old and new photographs and drawings as well as names that are as familiar today as they were when the town's history began - Favre, Cuevas, Ladner, Nicaise, and Haas. The book contains brief histories of Kiln's neighboring piney wood communities - Fenton, Jourdan River Shores, McLeod Water Park, Holly Bluff, Diamondhead, and the NASA Stennis Space Center. A section is included on the town's athletic celebrities, including Brett Favre, in addition to archival and current maps, and a driving tour of the Kiln.

As a university student exactly feel bored for you to reading. If their teacher asked them to go to the library or to make summary for some book, they are complained. Just tiny students that has reading's heart or real their hobby. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to go to the library. They go to right now there but nothing reading really. Any students feel that studying is not important, boring and also can't see colorful photos on there. Yeah, it is to get complicated. Book is very important for you personally. As we know that on this time, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore , this Kiln Kountry: Home of Brett Favre can make you experience more interested to read.
